Everseat Working with Lyft to Enhance Patient Access to Healthcare

Baltimore, MD—Everseat, a technology company with a cutting-edge platform that allows patients to schedule doctor’s appointments directly from their smartphones, tablets or laptops announced today that it is working with Lyft, the fastest-growing rideshare service in the U.S. Together, the companies have integrated their technologies to not only offer easier access to booking healthcare appointments, but easier access to transportation to those appointments as well.

For some patients, it may be difficult to have reliable transportation to healthcare appointments. This partnership makes it possible for the patients to arrive on time, reducing unexpected cancellations and no-shows. Once an appointment is booked through the Everseat app, the patient can review the costs for either a Lyft or Lyft Plus (larger vehicles with more seats), request a ride, and then see the approximate ETA of the driver.

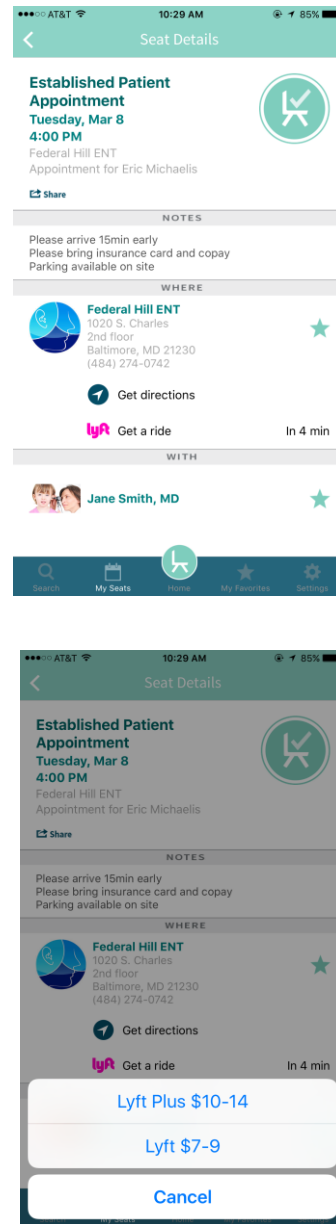

“Working with Lyft adds tremendous value to our platform. We are on a mission to build the most robust scheduling platform for healthcare” said Jeff Peres, the CEO and co-founder of Everseat. “Access is a complex concept. Everseat is committed to partnering with leading technologies to drive increased efficiency—and this relationship is an outstanding example.”

About Everseat

Everseat is a patient-centered scheduling platform that helps patients get access to appointments they need with their healthcare providers. The Baltimore-based technology company offers a web- and mobile-based platform that enables healthcare providers to post open appointments to the platform so that patients can find slots that work for their schedules via the free Everseat mobile or web app. Appointments are posted and claimed in real-time, significantly increasing efficiency for the providers, and dramatically improving the patient experience.
